I'm a proud husband and father of four kids 10 and under, with deep family roots in Mandurah. My family has seen this community grow from a small farming town into a city of over 100,000 people, and I want to ensure it remains a place we are proud to live, work, and raise families.

I work with Western Power, attending faults to restore and maintain power, which has taught me the importance of reliability, safety, and community service. I'm also passionate about cricket, football, golf, fishing, and water activities that make Mandurah unique.

As councillor, I'll work to:

Protect Mandurah's culture and character.

Encourage private investment over ratepayer funding.

Support affordable community sport and build strong grassroots clubs.

Preserve our waterways and outdoor lifestyle, including fishing and boating.

Address homelessness with compassionate, practical solutions.

Keep Mandurah affordable, family-friendly, and welcoming for young families and retirees.
